The 4th Ibero-American Qualitative Health Research Conference to take place in Fortaleza, Brazil, is a tribute to the consolidation of the sub-field of qualitative health research in Latin America, Spain and Portugal. The opportunity to exchange and advance knowledge in this area has the potential to offer a significant contribution towards new understandings regarding health services, policy-making and population health. The theme of the congress, "diversity of knowledge, knowledge construction and social transformation", is an instigating call for participants to critically analyse the current Ibero-American production from several perspectives. The conference is closely aligned with the core orientation of the University of Toronto's Centre for Critical Qualitative Health Research, and we congratulate the national and international organizing and scientific committees for proposing such a theme.
